

Shellie Leger is a Maine writer. She's lived "away," mostly in NYC and Cambridge, Massachusetts, having fled her home-town of Rumford as any writer must at the age of 17. Recently she returned to her home state to her hopefully permanent home in West Paris where she lives with her husband Steven, step-daughter, 2 dogs, one cat and a pot bellied pig and is a practicing psychotherapist. She is also the mother of three young adult children who have struck off on their own. She is a published writer of short-stories. Lonely Specks is her first novel, and the first book of her character-driven trilogy called Fairy Shrimp Trilogy, aptly named after the tiny translucent vertebrates that dwell in the vernal pools of Western Maine.

Shellie may be reached at paregoricpress@gmail.com or at www.shellieleger.com